Korea Reminder Red China Tells SEATO To Stay Out Of Laos

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP)—Pointedly recalling Peiping's intervention in the Korean War, Foreign Minister Chen Yi of Communist China warned Sunday that if the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization sends troops into Laos, "then China will also send troops."

The foreign minister, also a top military leader, hurried through a news conference here before concluding a five-day visit to Indonesia.

His statement on Laos was reminiscent of Red China's warning in the autumn of 1950, a month before Peiping entered the Korean War, that China "would not stand idly by" if United Nations troops approached the Yalu River.

Newsmen did not get a chance to ask Chen Yi about Moscow's latest proposals on Laos. In reply to a British plan for an immediate cease-fire in Laos, the Soviet Union Saturday suggested holding a 14-nation conference on the political future of Laos and agreed to join Britain in calling for a cease-fire. However, the U.S.S.R. wants to hold a conference whether or not the fighting stops in Laos.

It is generally assumed that Moscow and Peiping consulted before the Soviet Union made its counterproposal on Laos. Chen Yi said Red China's solution to the fighting between pro-Western and pro-Communist forces in Laos is to "let the Laotian people settle their differences themselves and withdraw all foreign intervention. This would insure peace and neutrality in the country."

However, he alluded to SEATO's warning that it would take action if the war does not stop. Chen Yi said: "If SEATO commits any error over Laos it is their own affair."

"Remember," he cautioned, "China was compelled to participate in the Korean War only after the U.S. forces went to our border beyond the Yalu River. Only then were we forced to take part."

Then Yi pointed out that China borders on Laos as well as Korea. He added: "I can inform all the world that up to now China has not taken part in the Laotian civil war. Any worsening in the Laotian situation is not the responsibility of China."

LONDON (AP)—Prime Minister Tengku Abdul Rahman of Malaysia said Sunday the situation in Laos is "still extremely serious." Leaving for home after a month-long visit to Britain, the Malaysian leader expressed skepticism about Saturday's Soviet reply to British plan for ending the civil war in Laos.

Fighting Subsides In Laos

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP)—Fighting subsided again in Laos Sunday after military setbacks that some here regard as heavier psychological than strategic blows to the pro-Western government.

Many sources reported no new major encounters with pro-Communist rebels. Saturday the government said the rebels were attacking three major points in eastern and southern Laos. The government also had reported the fall of Tha Thom Friday. But the military threat posed at the capture of that city in the narrow waist of Laos now is being minimized. The rebels face only roadless jungle and ravines if they try to push 40 miles ahead to that border and cut this country in half.

However, the loss of Tha Thom was regarded as a serious setback for morale and prestige at a time when Laos is the focal point of international diplomatic maneuvers.

Heiress Gives Birth To Son

NEW YORK (AP)—Gamble Benedict, 20, runaway heiress who married Romanian-born chauffeur Andre Porumbescu four days short of a year ago, gave birth Sunday to a son in a New Jersey hospital.

Dr. John Langstadt of New York, who assisted at the birth as the personal physician of the mother, said the infant weighed 6 pounds, 13 ounces. "She was delighted, especially since it was a boy," the physician said. "The husband also was very happy and certainly delighted that it was a boy."

Four Children Among Victims 12 Killed In Keystone Accidents

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Four children were among the 12 people killed accidentally in Pennsylvania over the Easter weekend. Five died on the highways.

The worst traffic accident killed three servicemen Friday night in McCamelsburg. It was raining and their station wagon veered across the slippery highway. The vehicle collided with a truck. The dead were Charles L. Eldridge, 20, of Meadville; Irvin L. Muir, 18, of Nu Mine, Armstrong County, and John R. Howsare, 20, of Altoona. Eldridge and Muir were in the Army, Howsare in the Air Force.

The other victims:
Ephrata—Jane Buohl, 7 months old, killed Friday night when an electric coffee pot used as a vaporizer next to her bed short circuited and set fire to her blanket.
Doylestown—Eric Steinbinder, 10, of Plumstead Township, hanged himself Friday night, apparently when he slipped while a nylon string was looped around his neck. The other end of the string was caught on a hook.
McKeesport—David Markovich, 15 months old, of Elizabeth R. D. 3, died Saturday at a hospital after swallowing a quantity of aspirin at his home.

Christians Commemorate Resurrection Of Christ Amidst International Tension

By The Associated Press
Christians everywhere commemorated joyously Sunday the Resurrection of Christ. But adding a somber note to an otherwise joyous Easter Sunday was international tension.

Fervent prayers for peace in a just world were uttered at special church services attended by millions around the globe. In Vatican City, Pope John XXIII called men to the peace of the risen Christ and, as he did a year ago, spoke bitterly of violence that is troubling the world. More than a quarter-million people, including tourists from many lands, cheered the 79-year-old pontiff of the Roman Catholic Church at St. Peter's. In England, Dr. Geoffrey Fisher, the archbishop of Canterbury, advised churches to refrain from political controversies and theological quarrels.

"How often," he exclaimed in an Easter sermon in Canterbury Cathedral, "do good and Christian men, faced with the terrible conflicts of race or creed, demand justice, when all they mean is their own dominance." As the sun rose over the Jordan sector of the Holy City of Jerusalem, pilgrims from Europe and America assembled in a quiet garden around the mouth of an empty tomb to commemorate Christ's Resurrection.

A service was conducted in German and English in the garden outside the city walls, built around an ancient Semitic tomb which looks very much like the one from which the stone was rolled away on the first Easter morning.

High Mass
Inside the city walls, around the traditional Holy Sepulcher, Alberto Gori, celebrated a pontifical High Mass. In the United States, President and Mrs. Kennedy attended church services at Palm Beach, Fla., without incident under a double guard of Secret Service men. Amid reports on a kidnap plot against their daughter, Caroline, 3, and threats against the entire family, the President and his wife slipped into St. Edward's Roman Catholic church by a back route to divert a crowd.

A right-side section of the church usually used by the Kennedys was roped off but it was not used. Instead they took aisle seats on the opposite side of the church and were surrounded by six Secret Service agents, including Chief U. E. Baughman. The President and his wife left by the front exit, ahead of other worshippers.

Must Obey God
At Taipei on Formosa, Chinese Nationalist President Chiang Kai-shek, in an impassioned Easter message, urged the world "not to beg for peace from the Communists, who are the source of sin."

The president and Mrs. Chiang Kai-shek, both Christians, spoke their Easter meditations at the private Methodist Church services. In Warsaw, Stefan Cardinal Wyszyński, primate of Poland, assured Polish Catholics in an Easter message that all attempts to "close the lips of the Church are in vain because we must rather obey God than men."

The cardinal spoke in veiled terms that contrasted sharply with his open charges two weeks ago that the Catholic Church in Poland is being persecuted. He made the address after celebrating High Mass before nearly 1,000 persons in Warsaw's Cathedral of St. John.

Millions of Poles flocked to similar Masses in flower-bedecked churches before sitting down to elaborate Easter feasts in the Polish tradition.

Weather Fickle
The weather around the world was as fickle as spring. New York had bright sunshine but a cold wind and, for a bit of variety, a brief snow flurry. An estimated 750,000 persons turned out for the traditional fashion parade along Fifth Avenue—about half the number participating last year.

The weather discouraged Easter parades in England and Scandinavia, especially in Denmark and Sweden, bright sunshine of Easter day was preceded by snow. Rain fell in many parts of Germany. Moscow had a white Easter. Two inches of snow fell during the night and snarled traffic for foreigners attending Easter services. Easter for the Orthodox Church comes next Sunday.

TALKING SHORTWAY—Four men who have played major roles in expediting construction of the Keystone Shortway are pictured as they chatted at a testimonial dinner given at Williamsport for Park H. Martin (right), state secretary of highways. Most of progress to date on the 300-mile Stroudsburg-to-Sharon route has come during Martin's tenure in office.

Seated next to Martin is State Sen. Z. H. Confair, president of Keystone Shortway Assn. Also shown are John L. Stinson (next to Confair), chief engineer in Pennsylvania for U.S. Bureau of Roads, and Horace G. Heller, managing editor of The Daily Record and director-at-large of the association.

Shortway Construction Time Cut By Legislative Okay Of Funds

LEGISLATIVE approval of a 300-million-dollar increase in the borrowing capacity of the State Highway and Bridge Authority has reduced construction time for the Keystone Shortway by two to three years.

So declared Park H. Martin, state secretary of highways, in an address Friday night at Williamsport. He spoke at the close of a testimonial dinner given in his honor by the press and radio division of the Keystone Shortway Assn.

Two years ago, Secretary Martin had estimated that it would take about 10 years to complete the 300-mile Shortway between Stroudsburg and Sharon. Based on his new forecast, the Shortway will be finished by 1966 or 1967 if present schedules are followed.

Highway construction costing four billion dollars and taking 24 years to complete has been proposed to the Highways Department, Secretary Martin disclosed at the dinner.

He said about $1.5 billion of the total represented work on the federal interstate system, and $320 million of that amount—or slightly more than 20 percent—is earmarked for the Shortway.

Charts prepared by Martin and his deputy, Fred S. Poorman, revealed that 28.9 miles of the Shortway are under construction, a figure which includes 19.9 miles in Monroe County and nine miles in Jefferson and Clarion Counties.

Elsewhere, 36 miles are under location study, 68 miles are in the preliminary engineering stage, 39 miles are ready for public hearings and 132.7 miles are in final design.

Included in the latter category is the entire 89-mile stretch from Crescent Lake, Monroe County, to White Deer, Union County.

Both Martin and John L. Stinson, chief district engineer for the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads, praised the Shortway area for its cooperation with the state and federal governments. They said it was the only occasion in their experience where they had met with no arguments whatsoever from local groups on the proposed location of a major roadway.

Both officials credited State Sen. Z. H. Confair, president of the Shortway Assn., and other supporters across the state for leaving the decisions as to location to the engineers hired to chart the route.

Four newspapermen affiliated with the association spoke briefly thanking Martin for his interest in the Shortway program.

Heller Lauds Martin
Horace G. Heller, general manager of The Daily Record, paid tribute to the secretary as a career man whose word on highway matters supporters of the Shortway had learned to respect.

Heller observed that he represented the profession of "hard-bitten newsmen who are hard to convince. When more than 150 newspaper people turn out to honor you, Secretary Martin, I think it is because they hold you in the highest regard. I hope you stay on as secretary forever."

Others who praised Martin were Paul W. Horn, Sharon Herald; William K. Ulrich, Clearfield Progress, and Quentin E. Beauge, Williamsport Sun-Gazette. Lee W. Stauffer, Danville News, served as toastmaster.

A bomb thrown among strollers in the Place de la Breche in Constantine, eastern Algeria, killed a 17-year-old girl and wounded at least 32 other persons.

At Mostaganem, seaside city in western Algeria, a rebel terrorist tossed a grenade into the doorway of a municipal dance hall and wounded six more persons.

Another terrorist bomb hurled into an Algiers street wounded a French soldier.

Moslem Killed
A French military patrol in another part of Algiers shot a Moslem who was shot and killed when he drew a knife.

In Paris, a rebel commando unit attacked a police station in a section inhabited by many Algerians and killed one Moslem police auxiliary and wounded two.

Police returned the fire, killing one of the attackers, wounding another and capturing a third.

Crippled Airliner Lands Safely

BOSTON (AP)—An Eastern Air Lines plane, with two damaged tires on its nose landing gear, came to ground smoothly Sunday night on a four-covered strip after circling Logan International Airport for 2 hours and 8 minutes.

None of the 70 persons aboard felt more than the customary touchdown. Among the passengers were some students returning to Boston-area schools after the Easter vacation.

In Algeria France Facing War Continuation

PARIS (AP)—Algerian nationalists Sunday served a forceful Easter notice of their preparedness to continue the war against France, with a series of bombings and attacks here and in Algeria in which 43 persons were wounded and three killed.

At the same time, rebel headquarters in Tunis reiterated in a statement that the nationalists will not go to Evian-les-Bains for peace talks, scheduled for Friday, unless the French position is "clarified."

Massive Education Bill Recommended By Governor's Unit

HARRISBURG (AP)—A massive effort that will practically double the state's public education bill by the end of this decade has been recommended by Gov. Lawrence's committee on education.

The report, which the committee will present to the governor Wednesday, is a bold, imaginative blueprint for education from kindergarten through college.

It will be up to the legislature to decide whether the blueprint is practical and possible.

If adopted in full, the program would raise the cost of education from $875.5 million in the current school year to $1,655,200,000 by 1969-70.

Even without its recommendations, the committee estimated the cost would rise to $1,293,400,000. Thus its program would add approximately $361 million to the school bill by the end of the decade.

No Tax Formula
The committee did not say how much this will mean in additional state and local taxes. But informal guesses were in the neighborhood of $600-$650 million. The balance would come from increased yields from present taxes.

The added cost would be shared about equally by the state and local governments, with the state's share going up by 1969-70 from the present $459.1 million to $897.3 million and the local districts from $416.3 million to $757.9 million.

The keystone of the whole lower school structure erected by the committee after a year of intensive study is compulsory reorganization, one of the most controversial subjects in public education.

Nevertheless the 30-member committee achieved near unanimity that reorganization would be a necessary first step to implementation of its program for the grades kindergarten through 12.

"Without new and larger school districts, all of the higher teachers' salaries, curriculum minimums and special education programs here offered are as sounding brass and tinkling cymbals," the committee said.

A second major feature of the report is the recommendation that the state quadruple its commitments to higher education so that no qualified Pennsylvania youngster will be deprived of an opportunity to continue his or her schooling beyond high school.

This primarily involves establishment of a community (junior) college system, an extensive, competitive scholarship program, state-insured tuition loans and expanded facilities in the existing institutions.

Both Martin and John L. Stinson, chief district engineer for the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads, praised the Shortway area for its cooperation with the state and federal governments. They said it was the only occasion in their experience where they had met with no arguments whatsoever from local groups on the proposed location of a major roadway.

Both officials credited State Sen. Z. H. Confair, president of the Shortway Assn., and other supporters across the state for leaving the decisions as to location to the engineers hired to chart the route.

Four newspapermen affiliated with the association spoke briefly thanking Martin for his interest in the Shortway program.

The result would raise the level of state support of higher education from $48.3 million to $130.4 million in 1969-70. Eighty-five percent of that cost would be borne by the state and the rest by local governments. The local share would be used exclusively for support of community colleges.

A third major feature of the report is its attention to teachers' salaries.

Salary Hike
It recommends that: The starting salary be raised immediately by $600 to $4,200 a year.

Teachers be guaranteed $6,500 a year after 10 years' service. Major emphasis be given in the extremely technical formula used to distribute state aid to salaries so that the average annual wage in Pennsylvania be raised from the present $5,300 a year to $8,100 by 1969-70.

Among its recommendations is one endorsing centralized tax collections within the counties, a controversial proposal that has been a study in itself elsewhere. The committee, however, proposes only that the means for centralized collections be provided; it does not propose that it be mandatory.

On the subject of federal aid, the committee urges the governor to give it his support.

Rep. Jeanette F. Reibman, D-Northampton, chairman of the House Education Committee, was drawing up a dissent to the report.

Her minority report was to be presented to the governor Wednesday along with the majority recommendations. It was believed her major disagreement was over subsidies.

The initial cost of the committee's recommendations was estimated for the 1961-62 school year at $66.9 million. About $31 million in new taxes would be required.

It is expected that the administration's legislative leaders could dust off the six-mill intangible personal property (stocks, bonds) to meet almost all of the cost. The administration proposed such a tax in 1959 but the Republican-controlled senate killed it.

Legislative sources said the tax was being held in reserve this session specifically for education. It would raise an estimated $25.5 million. Where the balance of the $31 million might come from was not known.

The committee discussed a broad range of other potential tax sources, without making any recommendations.

Its recommendations provide for a system built upon the existing elementary and secondary school districts, but under contract with the colleges and governed by the State Council of Education's proposed committee on higher education.

Its plan for compulsory organization would set up basic districts of 10,000 pupils each. But there are several exceptions provided so that, in effect, it proposes districts containing between 5,000 and 10,000 pupils.

County school boards would have to submit reorganization plans by July 1964. The plans would have to be put in effect by 1966.

A new, five-member, commission on reorganization would be set up to supervise reorganization and force it where necessary. The report also recommends that Penn State's facilities be expanded to take care of 35,000 full-time students by 1970. The present enrollment is 21,000.

Caroline Kidnap Details Disclosed

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP)—A talkative pro-Castro Cuban employed in a Miami, Fla., garment plant touched off the current intensive investigation of a reported plot to kidnap President Kennedy's daughter.

The story of how the inquiry by the U. S. Secret Service and police got started was related Sunday by an authoritative source familiar with the details. This is the account set forth originally by the Miami Herald—with some details withheld by the source to safeguard informers:

The Miami garment worker was overheard about 10 days ago remarking: "We ought to abduct Caroline Kennedy to force the United States to stop interfering with Cuba's (Castro) government."

The reference, of course, was to the President's 3-year-old daughter.

This remark and others were reported at a March 24 Miami meeting of the Puerto Rican Democratic Organization. The next day representatives of this organization related the episode to Wendall Rollason of Miami, director of the Inter-American Affairs Commission.

Rollason in turn informed Frank Watterson, a U. S. State Department security officer in Miami. And Watterson currently got in touch with the Secret Service. Meanwhile, Rollason continued to supply additional information to security officials.

Also brought into the picture and informed about the investigation was Tony Varona, coordinator of the anti-Castro Democratic Revolutionary Front in Miami.

Varona put his organization's intelligence apparatus to work on the case. This unit discovered that the talkative garment worker was pro-Castro relatives in Havana. Rollason, in confirming his role in the case, said "I Miami the Cuban garment worker 'may not have been a participant in the plot, but may have unwittingly spilled some of information involving others.'"

"Initial credit belongs to the Puerto Rican organization for bringing this to the attention of government security officials," he added.

Light Damage In 2-Vehicle Accident

STROUDSBURG Police reported a two-vehicle accident that occurred Saturday at 6:52 p.m. at the intersection of N. Fifth and McConnell Sts. No injuries were reported.

The drivers are identified as Ronald Mackes, 25, of Gilbert, and James C. Kintz, 26, of 9 Grandview St., East Stroudsburg.

Police said that both vehicles were traveling west on McConnell St. at the time of the accident and were rounding the curve into Fifth St. when the tractor-trailer operated by Mackes collided with the Kintz car.

Damages were estimated at $100 to the Kintz car and no damages to the trailer.

Trumatic Machines Burglarized

STATE Police, Stroudsburg Barracks, reported that Trumatic Tool and Machine Co., Inc., was burglarized sometime Saturday night. William Schiebel, co-owner, discovered the incident.

An undetermined amount of coins were taken from three vending machines, including a coffee, coke and cigarette machine.

Trooper Alex Kearn, investigator, said that the amount would be known after operators of the machines are contacted and an inventory is made.

Dickerson Gets Editor's Post

Lady Bugs Help E-Burg Gardener

THE minister carefully picked up a Lady Bug and deposited it outside the living room window, then returned to the committee meeting being held in the living room of his home in East Stroudsburg.

"Do you know where that came from?" asked one of the committeemen and added: "I think it is one that Robbins put here on Courtland St. bought in California."

That introduced several people to an interesting venture in gardening and insect control made by Robert D. Robbins, of 424 N. Courtland St. Robbins is employed at Hughes Printing Co., but has a great interest in his 100-foot vegetable garden.

Interviewed about the purchase of Lady Bugs for use in the garden, he stated that he had read that many orchards in California used them, instead of sprays, to destroy biting, chewing and sucking insects. He sent to California last year and purchased two boxes, 2000 bugs.

Says Robbins, "I do not know what the Lady Bug eggs look like or I could raise them here myself to use in the garden. As it is, I suppose I shall have to send for more." They come in a pasteboard box with a screen cover.

Robbins also sent to Pittsburgh for a pair of Praying Mantis which, he explained, deposit their egg cases in shrubbery.

So he expects to have enough of those to aid the Lady Bug in pest control as there are from 50 to 200 little Mantis in each case.

Robbins' objective is to be able to have a healthy, insect-free garden without use of sprays that are now under suspicion of being harmful to the human beings who eat orchard and garden products.

Rule Tomorrow In Rich Case

POTTSVILLE, Pa. (AP)—Schuylkill County Judge Charles W. Staudenmeier is scheduled to rule tomorrow on the manner of trials for three more defendants in the Rich burglary case.

Three defendants, Lillian Reis, Philadelphia nightclub owner, Ralph Stalno Jr., manager of the club, and John C. Berkery, Hadnot Township, N.J., are due to come to trial for the 1959 burglary of the home of John Rich, Pottsville coal operator.

Earlier another defendant, Robert Poulson of Philadelphia, was convicted of taking part in the burglary. Rich says $3,000 cash and $17,000 in jewelry was taken. Police say $478.00 in cash was stolen.

Attorneys for Miss Reis, Stalno and Berkery have asked for separate trials and for sequestration of all witnesses—not permitting the others in the courtroom while one is testifying.

Last week the judge ruled for a joint trial for the three, then reversed himself ordering separate but concurrent trials.

The certificates were presented by Dr. Lyman E. Jackson, dean of the College of Agriculture.

Harriman Sees 'K' Not Wanting War

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ambassador W. Averell Harriman said Sunday that Soviet Premier Khrushchev is "practicing brinkmanship" but he "doesn't want war."

In a wide-ranging discussion of international affairs, President Kennedy's personal ambassador at large made these points:

1. Prime Minister Phouma will have to have a place in any government established in Laos. If a "neutralist regime" is set up "there's a good chance of its remaining neutral."

2. Khrushchev has made to West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer "he said old proposals for Berlin couched in a slightly less violent manner." The Soviet premier is "not going to abandon his determination to alter the Berlin arrangement, but the four powers are standing fast."

3. "Our one hope is the United Nations in thwarting the Soviet attempt to move into the Congo through the Giza government."

4. Kennedy is getting his message across to the world. "There's a touch of Franklin D. Roosevelt in him that seems to be getting across and his message is very high."

5. American prestige, which Kennedy has in the presidential campaign had ebbed, is good today. "If the people of the world will look to us and if we undertake our share of responsibilities of the world, why our prestige will be strong."

6. If the United States sticks to its opposition to admission of China to the United Nations, "the Red Chinese are more likely to come around to recognizing that they have to accept international responsibility rather than their present aggressive attitudes."

7. Foreigners are becoming increasingly interested in "Kennedy's Peace Corps, now that they know members are going only where they are invited and where there are special jobs for them to do."

Harriman, Jr., back from an eight-month trip to Europe and Asia, spoke on a television-radio interview taped in Sen. Kenneth B. Keating, R-N.Y., for New York station.

Dear Abby

Dear Abby: I work with a man who says he's in love with me. I care for him, too, but I'm not as emotional as he is. My problem is that the moment we are alone on the job he tries to kiss me. And he expects me to tell him every few minutes that I love him, too. I don't care for that kind of stuff, while I'm working, especially since we are not always alone and we never know when someone is going to walk in on us. How can I let him know I would rather be just "friends" during working hours? He is very sensitive and easily hurt.

CAREFUL
Dear Careful: Since you obviously have better judgment than the Romeo who is trying to make time on company time, it is up to you to call the tune. Tell him to control his flame during working hours or you opinion.

Dear Abby

Dear Abby: I know there is an "Alcoholics Anonymous" and a "Gamblers Anonymous," but is there a "Charge Accounts Anonymous" for people like me? I don't know why I do it, but I run up charge accounts and can't seem to help myself. It is the craziest thing... when I get into a store I go wild buying things I don't really need. If I don't get help with this problem soon, I am going to lose my husband.

Dear Abby: Is it proper for a girl to offer a pencil and paper to a boy she meets at a dance? Many boys I have met at dances ask for my phone number and they never seem to have a pencil and paper. I always carry a pencil and note paper for this purpose. My girl friend said it was not proper as it looked like I was too anxious. I would like your opinion.

Dear Abby: Since you obviously have better judgment than the Romeo who is trying to make time on company time, it is up to you to call the tune. Tell him to control his flame during working hours or you opinion.

Foes Of Whites Are Acquitted

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP)—Twenty-eight foes of the government's white supremacy policies were acquitted yesterday of treason charges, ending the longest, most costly trial in South Africa's history.

The defendants were among 140 persons of all races arrested on Dec. 6, 1956, in nationwide raid aimed at cracking resistance to the government's apartheid policy—strict racial segregation. Some of them said through a spokesman they will "continue to work for the freedom of South Africa and all humanity."

Presbyterian Mission Program To Be Aired In Area By Leaders

KEY leaders and field workers of the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America will tour this area the week of April 9 to interpret the church's general mission program of $39,307,034.

General missions, the Presbytery of Lehigh in Bethlehem said, refers to work beyond the spheres of local parishes, across America and overseas.

The program will start on Sunday, April 9 when Rev. Francis Seely of Thailand and assistant pastor of First Presbyterian Church, Stroudsburg, speaks at Bangor. In the evening, Rev. Seely will give an address at the First Presbyterian Church, Stroudsburg.

Other addresses will be made the same day in Tamaqua by Rev. Ralph W. Chamberlain of Nebraska and Rev. David S. DeRogatis of New England Synod at Weatherly and in Bethlehem. On Thursday, April 13 Revs.

Seely, Chamberlain, and DeRogatis are scheduled to appear at the East Stroudsburg State College at 7 p.m.

Panel Discussion
At 8 p.m. the same evening, the team will appear at the Church of the Mountain, Delaware Water Gap, for a panel discussion. Rev. Wesley Crowther, of Shawnee, will be the moderator.

The last appearance in this area will be at East Stroudsburg Presbyterian Church on Friday, April 14. The team will give a talk at 2 p.m. Hostess will be Mrs. Jesse Flory of East Stroudsburg.

Other areas to be toured will be Easton, Pottsville, Hazleton, St. Clair, and Catasauqua. The theme of these meetings is "The Church, the Risen Christ and Today's World."

In addition to the church visits, the men will also visit campuses of the colleges in the Lehigh Valley area.

Under its general mission program, the United Presbyterian Church continues its ministry through 1,356 missionaries and fraternal workers in partnership with national churches in some 25 lands overseas. It supports 100 medical institutions and 800 institutions of Christian higher education in Africa, Asia, the Middle East, Latin America and Europe.

In education in the United States, the church is pressing programs to recruit able men for the ministry, train parish leaders, continue the education of its ministers through seminars and conferences, and aid field programs of Christian action, such as efforts to ease racial tensions.

Rev. Seely, is a furloughed Presbyterian fraternal worker in Thailand, giving most of his time to a revision of the Thai text of the Bible under the direction of the American Bible Society. He also shared in the general evangelistic work in Chiangmai, Thailand, where he was stationed.

Appointed in 1947 by the former board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. and assigned to Thailand, Rev. Seely was first engaged in evangelistic work in the Chiangmai field, especially in rural areas.

In 1950 there was urgent need for a missionary family to work in Lamphang. Mr. and Mrs. Seely offered to go to this more difficult post although it meant giving up work they were getting acquainted with in the Chiangmai area. From 1955 until 1957, Rev. Seely was in Pitsanuloke, still giving most of his time to translation work. He was also concerned about the problem of alcoholism in Thailand and helped to establish two groups of Alcoholics Anonymous.

Serving Here

In 1957 the Seely family returned to the United States on health furlough, and since 1959 Mr. Seely has been on leave of absence. During these years, he has served in the Madison-Limestone Larger Parish in Athens, Ala., and is at present stated supply at the Church of the Mountain in Delaware Water Gap and assistant pastor at the First Presbyterian Church, Stroudsburg.

Rev. Chamberlain is a Sunday school missionary in the sandhill country of Nebraska.

In his territory, half a dozen families form a whole neighborhood, and a trailer makes the missionary's summer home during the weeks he is carrying on vacation church schools in ranch areas.

From the time he was a boy in his teens, Mr. Chamberlain planned on a career in Christian service. A graduate of Macalester College in Minnesota and Omaha Seminary, he began his professional work while still a student at maha, by taking the position of student supply at Wymore, Nebraska.

He and his wife enjoyed the work they did with children that their thoughts turned toward special work in that line. Experiences in rural summer vacation schools for three years brought this interest to a head.

In the fall of 1940, the Chamberlains began their roving assignment in Nebraska. The whole state is their parish, but it is the western section that specifically requires help. The small churches and groups that are served are often many miles apart.

Field Director
Rev. DeRogatis serves on the staff of the United Presbyterian Board of Christian Education as field director for the Synod of New England. He provides on-the-spot guidance to the synod, its presbyteries, the selection and preparing of leaders and the strengthening of church school, camp and conference programs.

Prior to his election to this position, Mr. DeRogatis was the board's assistant field representative for the synod. Earlier he served as pastor of Second Presbyterian Church, Providence, R. I. and assistant director of the chaplaincy service for Rhode Island State Hospital and State Infirmary.

He has also served as pastor of Immanuel Presbyterian Church, Trenton, N. J.

A native of New York state, he received his B.A. degree from Bloomfield College, his B.D. degree from Bloomfield Theological Seminary, and his Th.M. degree from Princeton Theological Seminary.

Wage Tax For Upper Mt. Bethel

A ONE percent earned income tax ordinance has been adopted by Upper Mount Bethel Town Board of Supervisors.

The ordinance will go into effect July 1, 1962, and will permit the township to share in the tax revenue which was previously adopted by the township school board. The school board voted the same tax last summer.

The township's share for the six months is expected to amount to approximately $7,000. Board Chairman Harry Caille said the township tax will probably be collected by the same firm collecting the tax for the school board—the A. Berkheimer firm of Bangor.

The supervisors said the tax was enacted to "cover increased cost of governmental functions and services." Non-residents who work in the township or receive an income from the township are affected by the new tax.

The assessment will be one per cent on salaries, commissions and net profits from business, professions or occupations.

Expediting Delivery

The news from the Post Office Department is mostly good. In the first place, the department has announced that its primary function is "to expedite the delivery of the mail."

This is reassuring, for a lot of us have been suspecting for some time that expediting delivery had somehow become a secondary consideration.

Also welcome is word that the number of commemorative stamp issues will be cut from the 42 put out last year to 15 a year, which would seem to be more than sufficient.

These issues find a ready market among philatelists, producing a profit to the department of $3 million a year, but even collectors must be getting bored with a proliferation of issues of all sizes and colors, many of them commemorating obscure events and unexciting anniversaries.

One waits for improvement in another matter of Post Office productivity. A lot of the stamps President Eisenhower printed didn't stick and there was much complaint. Now President Kennedy, too, seems to be stingy with the mucilage and his stamps have a high fall-off rate.

Postmaster General Day is reported to be studying this sticky question and perhaps he will have it licked soon.

Opinions Of Other Editors

Confusion Over Bingo

Members of the Pennsylvania General Assembly may make up their minds at the current session as to whether to make legal an illegal activity which already has legal status despite its illegality.

If that sounds a bit confusing it is no more so than the time-honored and popular game of bingo. Although the game is unlawful, according to Pennsylvania law and the U. S. Post Office Department, on grounds that it is gambling, it is such a political hot potato that it has attained legal status.

Some time ago Burgess Walter Panek of Ambridge closed down bingo games in the town for a time — not because they are a violation of the law, but because one game was in competition with another on the same night. In a similar travesty, 28 persons were arrested a few weeks ago in Allegheny County in connection with a bingo game—not because it was operated, but because it allegedly was "rigged."

Now, a bill is before the State Senate which would legalize bingo when the proceeds are for charitable, religious, patriotic or civic purposes.

Finally and at last, the General Assembly may make illegal bingo, which now enjoys the cloak of illegal legality, truly legal. —Beaver County Times

George Sokolsky Says . . .

The Eichmann Trial

The most unusual juridical action starts on April 11 in Israel when Adolf Eichmann is brought to trial.

He committed no crime in Israel, but is charged with organizing the murder of 6,000,000 Jews in Germany, Poland and other territory that Hitler conquered.

If convicted, he will turn out to be the most efficient murderer in history, if that reputation is worth anything.

Murder was Eichmann's business. He was in charge of genocide, an unusual occupation for any man. He did not give his victims a trial; they were guilty by birth. It was not necessary to indict them, to gather evidence against them, to try them.

They were guilty because their grandparents were guilty. They were guilty because they were Jews. Even, if through conversion or intermarriage, they were Christians, it did not matter.

Eichmann employed the grand-mother test. Whoever had a Jewish grand-mother was ipso facto a Jew, even if the grand-mother were a No. 1, straight out of the sagas.

So Eichmann is to be tried for genocide and murder. Israel got hold of Eichmann by a most dramatic kidnapping. Eichmann was in hiding in the Argentine. He was traced, seized, and kidnapped.

The kidnapping was, beyond doubt, illegal but as the Argentine showed no disposition to go to war with Israel over Eichmann and limited itself to a protest, the matter became a fait accompli, which in diplomacy is often acknowledged as inevitable and unavoidable. It is now unbelievable that Eichmann will be returned to the Argentine, which does not want him.

There can be no question but that Eichmann will get an absolutely fair trial. Less than that would be harmful to Israel. However, he will not be on trial. What will be investigated and judged is history — the history of a period which has outraged every moral development of the human race.

Eichmann was the instrument of that historical indecency. He was an instrument of maniacal brutality. Whether he was more than a tool, the trial will show. Whether he is the originator of the genocide, the trial will show.

In many respects, the Eichmann trial can disclose the history of the period in its blackest and ugliest hues. For while this vast murder plot was unfolding, the rest of humanity sat by and pondered the possibilities of Hitler's greatness.

Congressional Quiz

Suffrage Amendment

By Congressional Quarterly
A Constitutional Amendment—the 23rd—to permit residents of the District of Columbia to vote for Presidential and Vice Presidential electors has been ratified. This quiz, which tests your knowledge of the amendment and ratification process, calls for four correct answers.

Q—True or false: Residents of the District have never been able to vote in national elections?
A—False. Congress approved the District area as the seat of government in 1790, but did not take possession until 1800. District residents were allowed to vote in the national elections of 1792, 1796, and 1800.

Q—Like all Constitutional amendments, the D.C. Suffrage Amendment had to be ratified by (a) a simple majority; (b) two-thirds; (c) three-fourths of the states?
A—(c). The Amendment was submitted to the states June 21, 1960.

Q—True or false: Now that the 23rd Amendment has been ratified by three-fourths of the states, no further action by the Congress is necessary?
A—False. Action by Congress is necessary, not to effectuate the Amendment, but to enact legislation setting up the voting machinery in the District.

Q—What did the 22nd Constitutional Amendment provide?
A—The 22nd Amendment provided a President from being elected more than twice. It was ratified in February 1951.

Q—As a result of the 23rd Amendment, District residents will vote for (a) one; (b) two; (c) three Presidential electors.
A—(c). The Amendment provides for "a number of electors of President and Vice President equal to the whole number of Senators and Representatives in Congress to which the District would be entitled if it were a State, but in no event more than the least populous state."

Q—True or false: One state legislature rejected the Suffrage Amendment outright?
A—True. The Arkansas House of Representatives refused to ratify the Amendment Jan. 24 by a 50-26 vote. The Georgia state legislature adjourned its 1960 session without taking action.

Q—True or false: The procedure for ratifying proposed amendments is prescribed by Congress.
A—False. The procedure is set down in the Constitution.

Veteran's Guide

Q—Where should a veteran write regarding mustering out pay?
A—Queries should be directed for the branch of the Armed Services in which the veteran served.

The Pennsylvania Story

Labor Not Sure

By Mason Denison

Harrisburg — It is significant that Pennsylvania's "big four" top-ranking labor leaders today sit down in a heads-together pow-wow with Governor Lawrence — "to see just where we stand," as one ranking laborite put it, and to find out just where labor stands today with the Lawrence Administration.

That organized labor in the Keystone State has been somewhat irked and nettled — up to this point at least — with the Democratic Lawrence Administration, was underscored nearly two weeks ago when on March 23 this column said:

"Indications are growing on Capitol Hill that organized labor in the Keystone State is becoming nettled and irked by what some labor leaders term 'a growing aloofness' on the part of the Democratic Lawrence Administration."

The meeting today, it is hoped, will iron out some of this "aloofness" that unquestionably has been brewing between the front office and labor in Pennsylvania.

Soviet Russia, which pretends to be so humane, actually entered into an alliance with Hitler and to please his genocidal concepts, dismissed the elderly Maxim Litvinoff and appointed Molotov to negotiate with Ribbentrop.

The Molotov-Ribbentrop agreement was one of the most outrageous documents in history. Subsequent to it, Stalin entered upon an anti-Semitic period which has continued to this day in all the vast territory of Soviet Russia. In fact, if Eichmann is found guilty, why not try his Russian counterpart?

There can be little doubt but that Eichmann will evade capital punishment. Such a verdict is antagonistic to Jewish law and the religious spirit of Judaism. Eichmann is being provided with a lawyer at the expense of the State and any witnesses he chooses to bring to Israel will be brought at the expense of the State.

The Eichmann trial is obviously and definitely political. The Israeli are attempting to establish by a trial the irrefutable evidence of genocide. It is a frightful idea to wipe out an entire people, the innocent along with the guilty. It is not justice to destroy those who have committed no crime because they were born to the wrong parents.

Nazism was a moral wrong. The economics of National Socialism were not dissimilar to other forms of Socialistic economics; the political organization of Germany under Hitler was not different from other monolithic states, some of which are on our side. Hitler's crime was not economic nor political; it was moral. He presented to the world the posture of an anti-Christ, of a human who regarded himself as a god and who murdered at will.

Such a man ordered the genocide of the Jews, because those who believe in God cannot believe in the supremacy of an individual man. In Hitler's struggle against God, the Jews were on the side of God — and he murdered 6,000,000 of them. However, Hitler is dead and the spirit of God prevails.

This, in essence, is the Eichmann trial.

How many remember the electrocution of Bruno Richard Hauptmann for kidnapping of the Lindbergh baby in 1937?

Stroudsburg Kiwanis Club held an April Fool's party in the Penn-Stroud Hotel for its members and their wives.

The Spa basketball team defeated Tannersville to gain the court championship in the Pocono Mountain Basketball League. The score was 47-35.

Two American employees of the Mutual Broadcasting Co. in Berlin, Germany, were arrested by the SS Troops. No reason was given for the action.

Or, as Joseph Burke, co-president of the Pennsylvania AFL-CIO, commented in speaking of today's gathering of heads:

"There hasn't been too much progress so far in getting action on labor's key legislative requests" — adding somewhat significantly: "We want to discuss our goals and plans and see whether the governor is with us, whether he will be neutral or whether he will oppose the programs in the Legislature."

The current session already has been under steam for three months, and as one labor leader expressed it, "the session with the governor is long overdue — to put it mildly."

That "there hasn't been too much progress," as AFL-CIO's Mr. Burke expressed it in referring to labor's so far withering-on-the-vine legislation, again was pinpointed by this column March 23:

"Some of the top pieces of legislation for example, dear to the hearts of labor leaders, are not receiving the full-steam-ahead support of the administration. They don't deny that most pieces of their legislative program are receiving support — but it is more of a 'tacit' support rather than a 'heart-in-the-glove' support."

It is this "tacit" support labor today is striving to change. Labor leaders insist they want "tangible" support by administrative forces — both in action and deed.

Unquestionably from today's meeting will emerge the usual statement of "confidence, understanding and common togetherness" contemporary political pros are adept at instilling in conferees and uttering thereafter — either through their own good offices or that of the other-side-of-the-table conferees, in this case labor.

There is (certainly understandably) a sense of concern building up within labor ranks over whether Pennsylvania Democrats — their political sidekicks of long standing — are becoming prone to go more their own way without the extremely close nudging and conferring with labor that heretofore has brushed strongly across the picture.

The reason: Pennsylvania Democrats today are strong in the Keystone State — stronger by far than ever, and they're growing stronger with each passing day. As a party, Democrats last year for the first time exceeded their Republican rivals in registration. By the time the current registration totals are in, this strength is expected to be even greater.

All this is somewhat of a far cry from Democratic minority days of yesterday when labor's support was not only needed but a backbone of the then loose, flabby and struggling Democratic Party in Pennsylvania. Now that Democrats are truly "on top of the pile" are they destined to forget their labor colleagues of the lean yesterdays?

It isn't viewed as likely — but labor (again certainly understandably) wants to make sure!

Ray Welsh, the former East Stroudsburg State College head basketball coach, is making quite a name for himself down in the Oranges, New Jersey way.

Ray, a resident of Stroudsburg, has set up a school district intra-mural program that has the eyes of Garden State school administrators popping all over the place.

Welsh's program is so popular that students — through Ray's urgings — continue the workout long after classes are over.

In fact, three score invade the gymnasium one hour before the school day starts just to perform Ray's own setup.

While the program is successful all the way, Welsh is finding out that his day is getting longer because of its popularity. Now Ray has to get in the gym at 7:30 in the morning and doesn't leave until 5 and 6 o'clock in the evening.

However, the ex-Warrior court expert, doesn't mind it at all. When he sees kids happy in a chore that helps build strong bodies, he feels this is compensation enough for the extra-curricular activity.

The Allen-Scott Report

Old Rivalry Flares

By Robert S. Allen and Paul Scott

Washington — That age-old rivalry among the armed services is rearing its battle-scarred head in the selection of the first Mercury Project astronaut — whose history — making into space is now slated in a few weeks.

The Army and Navy strongly suspect the Air Force is trying to grab this prize for one of its pilots, 34-year-old Captain Virgil Grisson.

So far this backstage battle has become a matter of the House Space Committee are taking a hand in it — with some ideas of their own on how this momentous choice should be made.

They contend it should be left to chance by drawing lots.

The NASA official, also expressed belief that the first Mercury astronaut will have a "90 percent chance of survival, as we now consider the Red-

The National Space & Aeronautics Administration wants the selection made by a special task force of scientists, headed by Robert Gilruth, Langley, Va.

That's still the plan. But the House Committee has won an important concession.

NASA has firmly promised to give all three Mercury Project astronauts a flight into space this year — tentatively at six weeks' intervals.

This unannounced addition is a major change in Mercury plans.

It was formally pledged by Dr. Robert Seamans, associate NASA administrator, at a private meeting with the Committee when he was bluntly put on the spot on the embroiled selection issue.

Representative Overton Brooks (D., La.) chairman, got this unequivocal commitment from Seamans.

The NASA official, also expressed belief that the first Mercury astronaut will have a "90 percent chance of survival, as we now consider the Redstone rocket 90 percent reliable."

If the Mercury flights are successful, an attempt may be made later in the year to hurl a man into space atop an Atlas intercontinental ballistic missile.

Such a "shot" would travel a far greater distance than a Redstone rocket.

On The Griddle — Committee member told Dr. Seamans they had been informed the Air Force leaked the widely-published story that Marine Lieutenant Colonel John Glenn, Jr., 39, had already been selected to make the first Mercury flight.

Apparent intention of this report was to embarrass NASA, and adversely affect Glenn's chances of being chosen, NASA flatly denied the story.

Representative James Fulton, Pa., ranking Republican contender that experiment succeed, an even more ambitious launching will be undertaken by the end of the year to orbit a man around the globe several or more times before bringing him back.

mittelman, bluntly raised this issue by asking, "We keep hearing reports that the Air Force is pressuring you. What about that?"

"Not as far as I'm concerned," replied Dr. Seamans.

"As I understand it," continued Fulton, "each of these astronauts (Grisson, Glenn, and Commander Alan Shepard, Jr., 37) is fully qualified in every way to make the first flight. Is that correct?"

"Yes, they are."

"If that is the case, and there is little or no difference between them," said Fulton, "then why aren't these young men given the opportunity to decide who makes the first flight by drawing lots. A majority of this Committee strongly favors that, and we urge it on you. To be very frank, if the Air Force pilot is named for this historic flight, it is going to be very difficult to convince us that some element of pressure didn't enter into the selection."

"It is our intention that the first astronaut should be designated by a group of outstanding scientists," said Dr. Seamans. "We feel that is the fairest and soundest way to decide this very important matter."

"Why go about it that way," argued Fulton, "if these three astronauts are about equal in ability and training. Why not leave the choice to chance rather than to a group that will make one man a millionaire and the other two paupers?"

Dr. Seamans vigorously challenged this.

"I don't believe that is so," he contended. "It is my understanding these astronauts have agreed to share and share alike in all gains and rewards from this program. Further, it is our sincere hope to give each of them an opportunity to fly in this ballistic trajectory this year."

"Will you make that an agreement of record with us," demanded Representative Brooks.

"Yes, we can do that," said Seamans.

"Then it is so ordered," asserted Brooks, "When will these orbiting Redstone flights take place?"

"They will be spaced about six weeks apart if the first shot is a success."

"Will each have a different purpose?" continued Brooks.

"Yes, we will test out different equipment in each flight," said Seamans. "The flights will be part of the training of the astronauts, and give each an opportunity to ride in a Redstone."

Committee members apparently are still not satisfied with what they learned from Dr. Seamans, Robert Gilruth, head of the special task force of scientists named to select the first Mercury astronaut has been summoned for questioning.

"We want him to tell us why it isn't feasible to do this by lot," declared chairman Brooks.

Just Between Us—

By Bobby Westbrook

That may not have been the fastest Easter parade on record but you'd need some track stars to beat it. Inside the churches the pace toward the doors was leisurely after the services.

Families, augmented by visiting kith and kin, filled whole pews and the aisles knotted with groups greeting the homecomers. The vestibules looked like gigantic flower arrangements with Easter bunnies nodding and turning.

But, once through the church door, everybody seemed to be whisked away like magic. The wind helped them along—as it tugged at those bonnets, but through thin spring coats and suits, swirled full skirts until with a swish everybody vanished into cars.

Even in the afternoon with the sun shining the streets were swept clean of people. It was a wild and wooly beginning for a month that is supposed to be all girlish tears and laughter.

April Fool came a few hours early at our house where I couldn't make the hill—again—because of the snow. And Saturday's weather wasn't anything to brag about. But fortunately the company was so bright and warm and congenial that who needed the sunshine.

However, from now on we're going to have to get down to the serious business of nominating officers, persuading potential committee chairmen, housecleaning—even where it doesn't show—and shortening last summer's clothes.

I doubt if cotton stretches but certainly the things that seemed plenty short enough last summer have a tendency to droop this year. The peculiar thing is that it happens every year. The successive hemlines still show on many a dress and if the trend keeps up we'll have enough extra material to make a couple of new skirts.

At least there are no holidays to distract us from our routine until Memorial Day which is two hectic months away. Except income tax returns, which can hardly be classed as an official holiday.

Talented Homemaker Finds Second Career

By ANNE HEYWOOD

How should a woman who is a grandmother and a widow with previous experience go about launching herself on the "second career" that has become so accepted and necessary a part of many women's lives?

In her words, as one woman put it: "How can I start a second career when I've never really had a first one? I was just out of school and traveling with friends in China when I met and married my husband. I've never applied for a job in my life."

Nothing But Housework? Had she really done nothing but housework all these years? Heavens, no! It turned out that she had once helped a friend start a sandwich shop that is still flourishing in remodeling a barn into a country restaurant; that all her friends called on her for decorating suggestions and that she had once modeled clothes for the mature woman and even posed for photographers.

Amateurish Things "But none of these were jobs!" she protested. "I couldn't put these amateurish things down on a resume." It took some time to make her see that there is nothing amateurish about getting two successful eating places into operation and that, good as they are, professional decoration doesn't have a corner on all the taste and talent. Of all her activities, however, the modeling seemed to offer the most direct route to a pay check and was the area where chronological age and previous jobs would count the least.

Her Alternatives Even so, the thought of "going into the city to compete with all those clever, young, well-trained girls" left her feeling limp. Fortunately, the alternative left her even limper: she didn't want to sit home and wait for her youngest son to get out of the army and then try to live on the fringe of his life.

So she put her country house up for rent, signed a lease on a tiny city apartment and registered with a model agency for work.

One of her early assignments was for a picture in a magazine that showed a grandmother welcoming her family home for the holidays. During the course of the afternoon, she fell to discussing the room's appointments with the photographer and made a suggestion for a minor improvement.

Upon learning of her interest in interior decoration, he asked if she would consider working with him to assemble "props" for pictures. He needed an assistant with taste and judgment, since he didn't have time to look for the exactly right vase, or choose a silverware pattern, or hunt up an accessory that would give a room setting distinction.

Hired By Magazine Here was work my friend understood and enjoyed. It was a job that made use of all her years of experience as homemaker and hostess and she did it so well that, within six months, the editors of the magazine for which her "grandmother picture" was taken hired her away from the photographer and asked her to come and work for them.

Today, as you leaf through your copy of Woman's Day and exclaim over the charming details and unusual touches that appear in the room settings and other photographs, you are looking at the work of stylist Mildred Scott, the widow who established herself in a fascinating second career without feeling that she had ever formally embarked upon her first one.

First Lady's Dress Blue--And Blurred

Palm Beach, Fla. (AP) — President and Mrs. Kennedy, a reported plot threatening them and their family, slipped in a side door and went to Easter Sunday church services without incident.

A few ruses employed by Secret Service agents guarding the Kennedys disappointed the crowd waiting in front of St. Edward's Catholic church. They didn't get much chance to look at the President and view the First Lady's pale blue Easter outfit.

But, Chief U. E. Baughman, head of the Secret Service, was all smiles, as the Kennedys, leaving quickly by the front door to the cheers of several hundred persons, went home safely to observe a traditional Easter Sunday with their family.

Caroline, 3, who is the center of a reported kidnap plot by a quartet of pro-Castro, anti-Kennedy Cubans, was happily enjoying an Easter egg hunt at the Kennedy seashore home with some of her young cousins. She was unaware that an extra guard had been assigned to watch over her.

Baughman, who said he had just about doubled the Secret Service detail at Sunday morning's 10 a. m. church services, has reported the three men and one woman believed involved in the plot against the President's family, still are under surveillance.

"They didn't come down here today," he told reporters.

The churchgoing was the one big public appearance the President and his wife were known to be making here and if anyone planned trouble, it most likely would have been there.

A crowd began gathering for the 9 a. m. service and it had swelled to about 1,000 as worshippers from the church milled in the street. Police were having trouble clearing the entranceway.

A few minutes late for the 10 a. m. service, the President and his wife, who had come by a back route, drove to the side door in a white convertible and went swiftly into the church. Only a handful saw them enter, and there were "oh's" of disappointment as the crowd out front realized what had happened.

Mrs. Kennedy wore a pale blue two-piece shantung silk dress with a straight skirt and collarless overblouse with three-quarter-length sleeves and seven buttons down the back. She had on beige shoes, beige elbow-length gloves and wore a choker necklace of large pearls. She carried a small beige handbag and a silver-covered prayerbook.

The President, hatless in the warm, sunny morning, wore a navy pin-striped suit with white shirt with a dark stripe, and a figured tie of blue and purple. He carried a small red prayerbook as they took aisle seats.

Frankie Frisch, Mr. Baseball Speaker At Dutch Treat; To Choose Officers, Programs

Frankie Frisch, one of baseball's most colorful figures and a member of its Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, will be the final speaker at the Dutch Treat Club to be held at the Penn-Stroud Hotel on Thursday night at 7.

Frisch, who moved directly from the Fordham University campus to the Polo Grounds in 1919, became a national baseball hero at the age of 24. One of the great second basemen, base-runner and batter, he holds a dozen diamond records, played in 50 World Series games and was manager of three major league teams.

He is still considered the greatest all-around athlete ever to come out of Fordham where he played basketball, baseball and football winning All American mention in 1918.

One of the game's leading ambidextrous batters, he amassed a lifetime batting average of .316. He was famous throughout his playing days as the greatest money player. Always handling a key infield position, he helped the Giants win four flags in a row, and later, when he was with the St. Louis Cardinals, he played on four more championship teams.

No other player has been in as many World Series games as Frisch and his 50th and last as manager of the St. Louis Cardinals and second baseman in 1934, marked the climax of his career.

During and after his active playing days, he has broadcast baseball wrap-ups on radio and television. As a Reconteur who'd rather talk baseball than eat, Frankie Frisch has a string of tales of the diamond and the dugout as long as the hits he belted over the fence.

At the dinner, Dr. Robert Brown, who assumed the presidency of Dutch Treat following the death of Tom Waring, will preside at the business meeting when officers will be elected and members will be balloted on the programs they wish for next year.

Membership Drive By Altar, Rosary

Tannersville — The Altar and Rosary Society of Our Lady of Victory Church is now having a membership drive, attempting to enroll all the women of the parish. Deadline for the drives end is May 1.

Members of the society cleaned the church for the Easter holidays. In May, Rev. Robert Galligan will officiate at a special ceremony.

PTA County Council Tours Pleasant Valley After Discussion On Federal Aid

The Monroe County Council of Parents and Teachers made a midnight tour of the new Pleasant Valley High School at Brodheadville, and still were wide-awake enough to admire the appointments and decor.

The tour had been scheduled as part of the county-wide meeting which began at 8 p.m. The speaker was Dr. Alfred Sumberg, professor of history at East Stroudsburg State College, who spoke on "Federal Aid to Education."

He traced the history of federal aid from the American Revolution to the present when 300 Federal Agencies spending millions of dollars provide federal support, financing and stimulating education from the kindergarten through college and graduate levels.

His talk was brief but the questions, answers and general discussion which followed continued until midnight.

The group was welcomed by Gordon Shupp, president of the Chestnut Hill Parent-Teachers Assn. Russell Pritchard, county president, presided at the meeting.

Herbert Ayres and Mrs. Widaman were named to a coordinating committee. The nominating committee includes Edward Doney, Hamilton, and Mrs. Gerard and Mrs. Frantz, Scotrun.

Delegates were asked to remind the local PTA units to send the names of their new officers to the County Council and to the Pennsylvania State Congress of Parents and Teachers as soon as they have been elected.

It was announced that the Northern District Meeting of PTA would be a conference the first week in May at Lehigh High School.

It was also announced that "The Role of the PTA" would be the theme of WVPO educational series "Horizons" on Sunday, April 23 with Dr. Sumberg as moderator.

Charm Course Added To 'Y' Women's Classes

The material will be progressive, beginning this week. Classes are held Tuesdays at 7 and Fridays at 1:15, with "homework" to be listed for its members.

The first week will feature a "beauty diet" plus scientific exercises. Members who are overweight may join the Fatties Anonymous group which takes a pledge to adhere to a day-by-day diet for health and vitality.

The course will include regular therapeutic body and breathing exercises building up to applying breathings to achieve a well-modulated speaking voice.

Students will also learn the application of the dance exercises done in class to daily movements for added poise and good carriage.

Recreational volleyball, badminton and swimming in the YMCA's heated pool will also be features of the classes. Further information may be obtained by calling the YMCA or Mrs. Roth.

Petticoat Rule Wins In India

New Delhi (AP) — Women of a southern Indian village have proved they are better administrators than men.

The experiment was tried in the seven square-mile Mattam-palli village of Andhra State, with a population of 1,710 men and 1,890 women.

The village administration is conducted by an elected body of elders called Panchayats. Women have never been admitted into it. Many villagers opposed the entry of women into politics last year. "We will not submit to a petticoat government," some shouted.

But the majority view prevailed. Women candidates were selected and to the eight-man body, six women were returned unopposed. Men who contested the two other seats lost by large margins.

Within a year, the "petticoat rule" produced results. The village got its first school, its first cooperative society. A spacious children's park and a community listening radio set enlivened its hitherto dull existence. The improvement of the lot of the untouchables received the topmost priority. Wells have been sunk to provide drinking water for them, and loans given to enable them to build houses for themselves.

"All these have been accomplished within a year," a former cynic exclaimed, nodding his head, and added: "I think the time has come for us, menfolk, to take to household work."

The Wyckoff Shopper

AB Wyckoff

Maybe eating Kangaroo Tail soup aboard the S. S. United States last Wednesday had something to do with it. At any rate, I was on my toes and hopping every moment of my two day stay in New York, and, thanks to a gracious "fairy godmother" who seems to wave a magic wand over me whenever I visit the city, I had the good fortune to meet a warm-hearted, kindly gentleman by the name of Max Asnas, whose very words are keys that unlock all doors.

I had first seen Mr. Asnas on the Jack Paar Show last week, when as a guest of Joey Bishop, he spoke of his famous Stage Deli-Catessen and Restaurant where celebrities gather to enjoy fine food, and people such as I congregate to watch them while they dine. Virginia Ludgate of our Wyckoff Travel Bureau had accompanied me to the city, and we were hungry. I remembered Mr. Asnas and his restaurant. "Maybe we'll see some celebrities," I said . . . so into a cab we stepped, and in a twinkling we were watching comedian Jack E. Leonard over our glasses of orange juice. This I discovered: in New York, one needn't know the address. If one says "The Stage," to a cabbie, he heads for 54th Street and 7th Avenue the way a fireman heads for a fire.

Everyone knows Max Asnas. He has been host to Marilyn Monroe . . . Joe DiMaggio . . . Mickey Mantle . . . Elizabeth Taylor . . . all the "big names." The other day at nearby tables I saw Jimmy Ritz of the Ritz Brothers . . . Mike Todd Jr. . . Eddie Chester, who originated the shadow role in Ted Lewis' "Me and My Shadow" act . . . Sid Gould . . . Lew Parker, and dozens of others. I am not sure how it happened, but before I knew it, Mr. Asnas, Mr. Leonard, another gentleman, Ginny and I were seated around a record player listening to Max's album, "Corned Beef Conchucius," the proceeds of which will go to a number of charities representing varied races and religions.

As if all this were not enough, Mr. Asnas had also promised to contact Joey Bishop to see if I might not have a ticket to the Jack Paar Show that evening . . . and I am still somewhat dazed to have found, a few hours later, that my name was indeed on the reserved list at NBC. As Mr. Asnas later told me, "Joey Bishop is a wonderful fellow. If Joey tells you he'll do something for you, you can be sure he will. He never forgets, and he never promises anything he doesn't do." I was pleased to hear this, for in my mind Joey can do no wrong. His humor is clean, wholesome, and real, and like thousands of others who proclaim him a star, I regard him as a friend. That's why I was so sure when I saw him on Friday that he would not rebuff me when I asked him for an interview . . . and why I was not surprised, when I apologized for speaking, he said, "It's no bother at all. I just hope I never feel so big I can't enjoy meeting people and talking with them."

Joey regrets that he cannot be present at our Wyckoff-Israeli fashion show the 21st of June at Tamiment, but he will be in Hollywood making a movie with all his friends who so delighted the public in "Oceans 11". Should this plan change, he will, of necessity, be keeping supper club and nightclub engagements he would otherwise cancel. He did, however, have a warm greeting for Monroe Countians, and highly commend the work of Hadassah, on the tape to be played Tuesday morning. (The Wyckoff Shopper broadcast, 9:45, WVPO).

My entire trip to New York was exciting: It was delightful to meet Mala Rubinstein again . . . she too is charming and sincere. Talking with Dr. Bernhardt Gottlieb, the eminent psychiatrist-author was enlightening and pleasant. The visit aboard the SS United States was impressive and elegant. But when I think back to this recent two day excursion into New York, I am happiest to know that Joey Bishop is as fine, likable and amusing as his TV appearances indicate . . . and I am proud to have met Max Asnas and his equally hospitable brother, Hyime, who feel that friendly goodwill should be the basic ingredient of the tasty food they serve.

1:11 Of The 13th Round

Griffith KO's Paret, Takes Welter Title

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Emile Griffith, a 22-year-old miller from New York, holds the world's welterweight boxing crown less than three years after the start of his professional career.

The Virgin Islands native, who was a 12th rounder in the 13th round and proved indisputably that he has a better punch than the ex-champion from Cuba.

In his first 15-rounder, the aggressive Griffith said he felt strong at the end after weathering the piston-punching flurries of Paret and scraping all the skin off the champion's left cheek with potent rights.

"It was far from his best fight," Griffith said, surprisingly and at the end of the 12th, his co-manager Gil Clancy, "smacked me and woke me up. He told me I had to have all the last three rounds."

It took Griffith only one minute, 11 seconds after that to win the fight and the crown.

A solid left hook followed by a right put the game Cuban out for the first time in his career. At the count of 10 he was still resting on his right elbow, eyes staring unseeingly at the ring lights.

A crowd of 4,618 which paid $20,314 saw the dramatic ending of the bitterly-fought battle in which the New Yorker slowly piled up a lead by mauling Paret's offense and then pot-shotting him with well-aimed rights and stabbing him with a potent left.

Well-Battered Cuban

It was a battle between two well-conditioned athletes, one of whom—Paret—defended himself largely with his well-battered face as he waded in endlessly in an effort to loose his piston-like flurries.

Griffith, after learning in the first couple of rounds that he had nothing to fear from the champion's largely powder-puff flurries, soon found a way to protect himself from the pestering punches and at the same time land his own booming shots.

Griffith would close in with the start of a flurry, tie up the frustrated Cuban, and work inside with punishing uppercuts. His punches though carried more authority, and two or three times, particularly in the 10th round, he had Paret groggy.

It had been expected in some quarters that Griffith, who never had gone more than 10 rounds, would wilt after the bout passed that point, but he seemed to be as tireless as his Cuban rival, noted for his endurance and ability to carry on under bitter battering.

Unexpected End

The ending was quite unexpected. Paret had backed the superbly-built New Yorker toward the ropes with one of his endless flurries when suddenly Griffith's left lashed out to land solidly on Paret's chin. It was followed in a split second by a right, but it was the left which did the work.

A startled, bewildered look came over the fading champion's scared face, and he took a step or two backward before tumbling flat on his back.

At the count of 10 Griffith leaped high in joy and turned a somersault.

Paret, who had to be half dragged to his corner, was downcast over the defeat, although he had lost two of his last three previous starts—to Moyer and to Gaspar Ortega.

Glenbrook Appoints Golf Pros For Coming Season

DR. Walter J. Matuszak, president of Glenbrook, Inc., announced over the weekend that C. "Bucky" Hewitt, a 25-year veteran professional of Syracuse, N.Y., will serve as advisory professional at Glenbrook course this summer.

He will head a staff of three pros who will direct the golf activities and give lessons. Hewitt also serves as head golf professional at the Westvale Country Club in Syracuse.

Named as pro-manager was Paul E. Patten of Cornell University. Patten has just resigned as assistant football coach but will retain the post of hockey coach and manager of the ice arena.

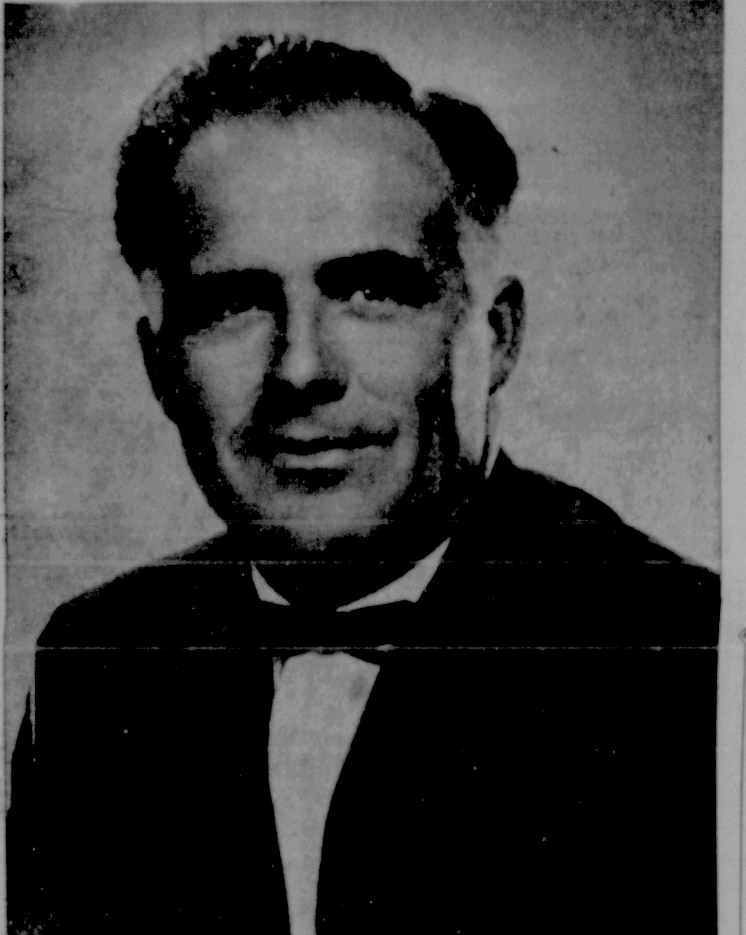

Patten was formerly head football coach at St. Lawrence University where he also served as hockey coach and arena manager.

He has been recognized nationally for his programs for juniors in the formation of hockey leagues. "The Board of Directors has authorized me to establish a program for Junior golf and I am most anxious to implement this order early in the season. Depending on the response, we hope to establish a series of clinics and leagues that will be open to all boys and girls between the ages of 6 and 16," Patten said.

Patten graduated from Notre Dame University in 1942 and served as a naval officer in World War II Pacific campaigns. He played quarterback at Notre Dame under coaches Leahy and Layden.

The third staff member will be announced in the next ten days.

Glen Brook greenskeeper, John Andrews, set the opening date as April 15 and reports the course in the best condition for this time of year since he took over those duties.

The winners had a 35 to 23 point spread in the first half but the Barbers came back strong in the second two stanzas to close the gap. Kane and Fellman teamed up to garner 38 points in the losing cause, with Kane getting 20 of them.

In the after piece, Jack's Mkt. romped to their 75 to 64 win over North Hunterdon (31) and Doug Kitson (20) paving the way.

Bill Manning of Hunterdon turned in 28 points to lead the visiting team.

Newfoundland Wins

Newfoundland poured in the points to the tune of 102 against Lim's Sporting Goods squad of 47 to win handily. Bob Strupewski collected 35 points in the fray and Gordon Deskus sank 29 more during the high-scoring affair.

Newfoundland had a 44 to 20 lead in the first half. The winners ripped for 39 more in the last frame.

DeNardo's, in posting their 85 to 59 win over Wyckoff-Sears, meticulously outpointed the losers in every frame to win going away. The winners rallied to 32 to 23 first-half lead, collected 20 in third and 33 in the final frames in costing to the victory.

In tonight's action, DeNardo will face Newfoundland in the first contest starting at 7 p.m. In the other encounter, Jack's Market will be matched against Pullo's. The latter contest will begin at 8:15.

Harness Unit Undecided On Granting Licenses

HARRISBURG (AP)—The chairman of the Pennsylvania Harness Racing Commission said Sunday "I simply don't know" whether any track licenses will be issued at the agency's meeting here Wednesday.

L. B. Sheppard also flatly denied that he had threatened to resign as chairman because of a reported disagreement with other members of the three-man commission.

However the veteran Hanover breeder of harness racing horses reiterated that the commission should open its meetings to the press and public when it acts to grant track licenses or to conduct other business.

The other commissioners are Martin Cusick of Shippensburg and Edward Kane of Philadelphia.

Sheppard conceded that the commission "are still far apart" on the question of which groups will be issued four licenses to operate pari-mutuel tracks in Pennsylvania.

He made it clear that he felt there wouldn't be any harness race tracks operating in 1962 if the commission doesn't reach an agreement now.

Sheppard said that following a conference with Gov. Lawrence, representatives of what he termed "two of the leading groups" seeking licenses were called in for a discussion with the commission.

The chairman declined to say what groups they were but said they are seeking to operate tracks in the Philadelphia area.

Lawrence, Sheppard said, advised the commissioners that it might be a good idea to get some of the leading groups seeking licenses to consolidate into one operation.

Celtics Win NBA Opener Over Hawks

BOSTON (AP)—The fresh Boston Celtics overwhelmed St. Louis 129-95 Sunday, taking the opener of the National Basketball Association's playoff finals behind the shooting of Tommy Heinsohn.

Heinsohn, the restless gunner of the defending champions, contributed 13 of his 26 points in the decisive second quarter.

Late in the first half the score was tied, for the fifth time, 47-47, when Heinsohn scored from underneath, putting the Celts in front to stay.

Boston went on to nine straight points and led 56-48 at halftime.

Heinsohn opened the second half with a long jumper and by the end of the third quarter the Celtics had added another 10 points to their margin.

Cliff Hagan, the game's high scorer with 33 points, and Bob Pettit, who added 17, carried the Hawks. The rest of the club, which wound up its full seven-game Western Division series with Los Angeles only Saturday, showed the effects of that grueling combat.

Boston had been impatiently waiting a week for this opener after finishing the Eastern Division series against Syracuse. The Celts were primed and needed only Heinsohn to pull the trigger.

The Only Way Is Up Detroit Begins Youth Movement; Fans Hopeful

By DAVE DILES
Associated Press Sports Writer

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP)—The Detroit Tigers may finish sixth in the American League again this season, but Manager Bob Scheffing promises "We'll be an interesting sixth-place club, if that's where we finish."

Ordinarily that wouldn't excite Tiger fans, who have become accustomed to hearing optimistic statements like "we're going to give someone a run for his money," and "if we get off to a fast start and avoid injuries, we could be right up there."

This is the year of the youth movement in Detroit and Scheffing hopes the movement is up.

The former Chicago Cub pilot is counting on kids to do much of the work. Steve Boros at 24 is the new third baseman. Jake Wood, 23, is the new second baseman. Some of the second-line pitchers are first-year men.

Detroit fans, tired of seeing their team finish in the second division with tired treads and club's new look.

"We should have good pitching, and a fine outfield," said Scheffing. "After that, it's anybody's guess. I'll be as anxious to learn how the kids will do as anyone else."

Frank Lary, Jim Bunning and Don Mossi form the heart of a pitching staff whose success will depend largely on how much help the club gets from its bullpen. Hank Aguirre, rescued from the minors a season ago, gives solid left-handed relief help and Scheffing is counting on newcomers Terry Fox and Jim Donohue — both former National League farmhands.

The Tigers are leaning heavily on Dick Brown for the catching, and the club believes the rangy 26-year-old can find himself at the plate. Brown flunked out in previous trials with Cleveland and Chicago but Scheffing, a former catcher himself, sees a brand new future for Brown with a few changes in his batting habits.

Scheffing need not apologize for his outfield. He has put Al Kaline back in right field and moved Rocky Calavito to left, leaving center field to Billy Bruton, acquired during the winter from Milwaukee.

The outfield has all the equipment to be one of baseball's best. Calavito has the power and Kaline and Bruton the range and speed. Charlie Maxwell, ousted from his regular left field job by the Bruton trade, supplies long-range left-handed pinch hitting power.

The infield has looked shabby defensively in the spring games, but Scheffing hopes Wood and Boros — both coming in with outstandings in the league hitting records — are suffering only from a case of jitters.

First base seems to be a pleasant problem — Scheffing must decide whether to use Norman Cash, the club's leading hitter at 286 last season, or Larry Osborne, the American Association's triple-crown winner at Denver a year ago.

Who says you won't get POLIO?

Polio struck last summer...and the summer before...and it will strike again this summer. There is no reason why you can't get it—unless you have had vaccine shots.

The groups who appear to be particularly susceptible are young parents and babies. And now is the time to do something about it. Don't wait another day to start the series of shots. It only takes minutes for protection.

Call your own physician or the local health department for information.

No one who needs this protection should go without it!

Don't take a chance—take your POLIO shots

YMCA Plans, Actions

THE PHYSICAL Committee of the YMCA held a meeting March 28. Plans for strengthening swimming program next year were discussed.

Getting more parents closer to the program, working with schools, and providing good leadership were some of the suggestions.

The committee felt a dedication swim meet to be held June 6 the YMCA anniversary, would be a good event to work on for the summer.

Plans for next year's gym exhibition were discussed and promotional ideas suggested. A good foundation to start building next year's activities was planned.

A good YMCA program is run with the help of a large number of volunteer leaders. The leadership training a person receives in a YMCA program certainly leaves its imprint on a person for life. These experiences now are helping to make self-confident leadership in communities year after year.

A Junior leadership club is training now Tuesday afternoons. The Y should like to have more people conscious of this training a boy or girl receives in the type of program run by YMCA's.

An experiment with a game room and a pool room has been going on the past couple of months. From this experience we hope another year will see permanent supervised game activities every afternoon and evening. The pool room will be closed at the Y effective April 3. Basketball games will be held each night Monday thru Saturday this week with the exception of Friday when the "Super Dance" will be held. Come out and watch good tournament basketball.

AS OF NOW, man has discovered 102 chemical elements.

Click Canadian Operators

By William A. Doyle

Q. During the past three months I have received weekly newsletters from H. R. Cory & Co., Toronto, describing the speculative merits of stock in Webbwood Exploration Co. Ltd. This stock is being offered for sale at 92 cents a share, in lots of 100 to 2,000 shares. I also received a long-distance phone call from a man claiming to represent H. R. Cory & Co. Obviously, this man is a true friend. He suggested that I buy some of this stock now, because it is expected to "move up" soon.

This whole thing smells of "hotter room" to me. Do people really go for this fast-buck routine? Should the Securities and Exchange Commission be notified?

A. You get a "yes" answer to both questions. Unfortunately, many people do fall for sales pitches such as the one to which you have been subjected. This goes on all the time, despite warnings and crackdowns by the SEC and state regulatory authorities.

The vast majority of people in the securities business are honest. They can make a good living by acting honestly. But, in any business, there are always some shady characters who are out to fleece the public.

This warning has been sounded in this column in the past and will undoubtedly have to be repeated in the future. Don't ever get suckered in by a hot-shot sales pitch, either by mail or phone.

Any time a proposal that seems phony is made to you, you should report it to the SEC and your state regulatory authorities. The SEC already knows about Webbwood Exploration. That stock has been on the commission's "Canadian Restricted List" since Sept. 29, 1958.

However, the SEC's jurisdiction ends at our borders. There's not much it can do about slick operators in Canada.

Q. In view of the probability that "aid to education" and medical care" to various groups will be the recipients of a lot of "gravy" ladled out of the Federal and state pork barrels, it seems to me that some of the companies in these industries might be worthwhile speculations. Can you find space in your column to name a few?

A. Nope! To even attempt to list "a few" would leave this column wide open to a charge of touting. Anyone who is interested in buying stocks of such companies can always get suggestions from almost any brokerage house. But, I'm not going to put my neck on the chopping block.

The so-called programs of "Federal aid" to this or that may eventually result in more business and profits for certain companies. However, anyone who understands how bureaucracy works knows that an awful lot of taxpayers' money will be wasted in the process.

We have had a perfect example of this with years and years of talk about "aid to education." A big chunk of the money extracted from taxpayers has been spent to run bureaus in Washington.

Meanwhile, certain local school districts have not built the new classrooms they need. The officials of school boards in those districts are waiting for a big increase in what they consider "aid" from Washington.

As a result, many classes are overcrowded and the programs in some schools are inadequate. Many school districts have accepted their responsibilities. Others have ducked their responsibilities and have been awaiting an increase in so-called "Federal aid."

(Mr. Doyle will answer only representative letters of general interest in his column. He cannot answer phone queries.)
